FORBIDS GIRL TO WEAR NIGHT DRESS

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—Ruling that a nightgown is not a necessity, Judge Harry B. Tuthill of the La Porte county superior court issued a restraining order at Michigan City yesterday, forbidding 18-year-old Mary Polaski to indulge in the extravagance.

The girl's parents had her arrested for incorrigibility some time ago and she was put in charge of Joseph Oliver, a probation officer. He got her a place as domestic in a family where nightgowns were used. Out of her first week's wages of $3 she spent $1.65 for a dress, leaving only $1.45 for her father. He protested bitterly and when it came to his ears that Mary contemplated the purchase of a nightgown with the next week's pay, he rushed into court to prevent it.

"She never wore a nightgown in her life," he told the judge, "and neither did her parents. She's been associated with nifty people, that's the trouble with her. The first thing we know she'll be buying an automobile."

After hearing all the facts in the case, Judge Tuthill gave his opinion in these words: "A nightgown is a comfortable, convenient and desirable luxury," he said, "but is undoubtedly not a necessity, particularly in this torrid weather. The only possible use of a nightgown is to keep off flies and mosquitoes, and the bedclothes will do just as well. Therefore, I forbid this contemplated expenditure."

EVELYN REFUSES TO MAKE DENIAL

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Mrs. Harry K. Thaw was asked today: "Have you seen the statement attributed to former Governor Stone of Pennsylvania, your husband's counsel in Pittsburgh, that you will suffer a great blow if your husband is declared a bankrupt?"

"I am not taking an active part in the bankruptcy proceedings," said young Mrs. Thaw, and she yawned wearily.

"Governor Stone is credited with saying that you have been extravagant, that your husband has been giving you $1000 a month for spending money."

"Gracious, isn't this a sleepy day?" again yawned the young woman.

Mrs. Thaw has been living in Mrs. C. G. Tucker's home, 201 West Eighty-fifth street, for nine weeks. To save herself from annoyance she has been known there as "Mrs. Fitzgerald." She purposes to go to housekeeping again within the next week.

One of her closest friends said today:

"Mrs. Thaw denies that she has had anything to do with her husband's bankruptcy proceedings. His petition came as a surprise to her."

"It is foolish to say that she has spent $54,000 in the last two years. Half that amount is about the sum."
